2027 Guide to SUMMER CAMPS, INSTITUTES & PROGRAMS

Editor's Note

Whether offering a steep learning curve or a gentle one, the summer programs within these pages run the gamut, from requiring an audition for acceptance to an open-door policy, from extra-curricular activities (tennis, anyone?) to non-stop daily practice in an isolated cabin the woods to ages 4 to senior. The one constant for attendance is a core of artistry, whether it's been honed to near perfection, left to fallow over the years, or just at the early stages of development (cue the 4-year-olds).

Size, cost, locale, length, and focus are equally varied. At New York City's Merkin Concert Hall, the five-day International Keyboard Institute and Festival takes on just 15 pianists under the tutelage of three teachers, including Founding Director Jerome Rose. Geared to high-school through post conservatory students, the Institute requires an audition for acceptance; tuition is free, and entertainment options are strictly self-guided.

Way at the other end of the spectrum is the summer-long French Woods Festival of Performing Arts, a "sleep away" camp for 7- to 17-year-olds offering instruction in everything from film and theater to classical voice to jazz, circus arts, composition, and skateboarding. Depending on which of the four sessions chosen, tuition ranges from $7,100 to $17,100; total collective enrollment is 750, and a post-entry audition is required for placement (only). French Woods boasts mounting 80 (mostly) musicals a summer. It may be the only entry in our Guide that offers a workshop for homesickness.

Getting back to the serious student of classical music, Switzerland's Verbier Festival Academy and Orchestra is among the best-known summer institutes, running June 28 to August 2 and geared to ages from 13 to 32 depending on which of the many programs chosen (from Junior Soloist to Atelier Lyrique; from Junior Festival Orchestra to Festival Orchestra, and more). The aim here, apart from a summer in the spectacular Swiss Alps, is to "gain invaluable professional experience" throughs serious study with well-established faculty and mentors. Verbier requires an audition for acceptance and tuition is free, with application fees from €55-€105, as dictated by program. No question that the angle of Verbier's learning curve is obtuse but its participants are anything but.

Susan Elliott
