Summer Music Programs for Grown-ups
A Few Musical Meccas
Editor’s Note

What is your ideal summer pasttime? Surfing in Hawaii? Biking the Dalmatian Coast? Trekking across the Cotswolds? Enticing for some, no doubt, but for others, the optimum vacation is singing in Sonoma, playing the clarinet in Baltimore, or being part of a lakeside chamber ensemble in Ontario.

Our feature story in this, our third annual Festivals Guide, outlines a number of summer music programs that enable individuals to practice a favorite avocation, make friends, and, in many cases, enjoy the scenery. At the Tuscany Project, you can join a gospel choir while spending a week on the Greek Island of Kefalonia, among other of the Project’s locations; or pull your flute out of moth balls and head to Baltimore for the BSO Academy, where you’ll get to coach under as well as play with Baltimore Symphony musicians; Scor! String Camps pop up in several locations around the U.S.; in Canada, Lake Field Music offers workshops and lesson in voice and an array of instruments across a variety of genres; and Berkshire Choral International brings major choral conductors in to preside over week-long sing-ins of classic repertoire in both national and international locations.

This year’s Festival Guide is our biggest ever, thanks to the enthusiastic response from the field. We can’t take credit for the specific information in each listing; the festivals provided that themselves. We can only take credit for asking the right questions. You’ll notice both newcomers, like Tippet Rise, est. 2016 in Fishtail, Montana, and old faithfuls, like the Salzburg Festival, founded in that historic city in 1920 and still going strong, but hardly standing still: Their chosen highlight? Cecilia Bartoli singing Maria in West Side Story. Not to be missed.

In the last decade, an increasing number of summer music programs for adults have been cropping up, Stateside and abroad. Some take place in a rehearsal room, others on a sprawling lawn, some are in the inner city, others by the sea or in the foothills. Either way, what better way to feed the soul and take a vacation simultaneously?

Tuscany Project

Location, location, location—the Tuscany Project always chooses exotic ones for its week-long summer sessions, taking its name from the first workshop held 24 years ago in a villa in the famed region of Italy. This year, there are two projects, one at the Liboun Chateau, about an hour outside of Prague in the Czech Republic, and the other at a pension on the Greek island of Kefalonia. In 2017, the Tuscany Project celebrates its silver anniversary and returns to Italy and its most frequent venue, the restored 12th-century villa Locanda del Gallo, in the Umbria hills.

The annual event is geared to cabaret, musical theater, jazz, and pop singers, but because enrollment is kept small—16 participants in the Czech Republic, 28 in Greece—and the faculty numbers at least four, there is plenty of flexibility. “We have beginners who have only sung in the shower, and we have people on their way to Broadway, and we’re comfortable with that range of skills,” says Belle Linda Halpern, a cabaret singer in Boston and one of the...
Woods brings an eclectic sensibility to the workshop. “Along with gospel, I like to bring in some world music, some reggae, or an arrangement of a spiritual that I heard my grandparents sing,” he says. “We might combine Everyday People by Sly and the Family Stone with something by Andrae Crouch. In 2014, we did an amazing job on a South African choral tribute to Nelson Mandela called Asimbonanga.”

Dates: May 21-29 (Czech Republic) and July 15-22 (Greece)

Price: 1,150 euros ($1,250) in the Czech Republic and from 850 euros ($925) in Greece; accommodations and meals provided. tuscanproject.com; (917) 547-8796.
Through high school and college Karlotta Davis was a serious flutist until she got to medical school at the University of Michigan. “There was no way I could practice,” Davis says. “I essentially put away my flute for 30 years.”

Davis, now an urogynecologist in Denver, is among the hundreds of amateur musicians who have decided to dust off their instruments—not to mention their technique—and head to the Baltimore Symphony for a week of midsummer magic. Offering the opportunity to rehearse and play a concert with a top-flight orchestra, the BSO Academy, now in its seventh year, brings people from all over the U.S. and even overseas. Accepting about 110 participants of varying levels, the week-long event includes full orchestra and sectional rehearsals, chamber ensembles, workshops, master classes, and optional private lessons. In addition to members of the BSO, the faculty includes guest speakers, such as this year’s Noa Kageyama, a psychologist who writes the Bulletproof Musician blog on how to cope with performance anxiety.

“We accept a wide range of players,” says Jane Marvine, an oboist and English horn player in the BSO who is closely involved with the Academy. “I think a key is that all of the parts in the orchestra are covered by BSO players, which takes the pressure off. Participants can find whatever level they’re comfortable at. Some just kind of sit there and watch the music go by and don’t play very much, and some are very skilled and play solos in the concert.”

Davis remembers working all week her first year (2012) on a solo in Prokofiev’s Romeo and Juliet Suite, then stepping onstage in Meyerhoff Hall for the big (free) Saturday night concert, with BSO music director Marin Alsop conducting.

“It was life changing,” says Davis, who has been back every year since. “Here was this wonderful conductor with laser focus looking at me, expecting me to do really great stuff but mostly wanting me to have fun. And when the time came, I nailed the solo. Absolutely nailed it.”

Davis credits her lessons with BSO principal flute Emily Skala. “She has been wonderfully supportive,” Davis says. “She has seen the progress I’ve made from my first academy, and encouraged me to get a better instrument. I got a used professional flute that has changed my playing tenfold.”

For Academy week, the BSO tends to program big, complex works that community orchestra musicians are not likely to get a chance to play. This year, repertoire includes Rachmaninoff’s Symphony No. 2, divided between two groups that each play either Siegfried’s “Rhine Journey” from Wagner’s Götterdämmerung or Ravel’s La Valse. For the first time, the concert will not be led by Alsop, who that week will be conducting the São Paulo Symphony Orchestra, of which she is also music director. BSO Assistant Conductor Nicholas Hersh will preside.

Dates: June 18-25

Price: $1,900 for the orchestral track; some meals provided; accommodations not included. Information: bsomusic.org/education-community/programs-for-adults. (410) 783-8051
Berkshire Choral International

Since 1982, singers have been heading to Western Massachusetts to spend a week immersed in the study and rehearsal of great choral works, capped off with a final performance with professional orchestra and soloists under a prominent conductor. Berkshire Choral International (BCI) is “directed at the serious amateur singer,” CEO Debi Kennedy says. “Our singers are typically people who are singing in church choirs or community choruses, and as many as 80 percent are repeat customers.”

This summer, three sessions will be held on the campus of the Berkshire School in Sheffield, MA, drawing from 150 to 200 participants each. Most stay in dorm rooms and take their meals in the school dining hall.

Sheffield is not far from the Boston Symphony Orchestra’s Tanglewood Music Center and other attractions in the Berkshires, known to be a cultural mecca in the summer. “Choristers get Friday nights off,” says Kennedy, “and probably about 50 percent of them go to Tanglewood for a concert and picnic on the lawn.”

There are also week-long BCI programs scheduled in Northern California; Newport, RI; and Vienna [see schedule to the right of the page].

The first time Holly Wolff, a soprano from Saranac Lake, NY, went to BCI, one of her favorite composers, John Rutter, was conducting. She has since sung under many other conductors. “I have learned something new from every one,” Wolff says. “To this day I warm up to what Anton Armstrong taught us. I sang orchestrated spirituals for the first time under Philip Brunelle, and with Julian Wachner I learned to love Haydn’s Creation.”

Along with two rehearsals a day, choristers can take an array of classes. “Every year I have a private lesson with a staff teacher. I call it my annual tune-up,” says Wolff, who sang Britten’s War Requiem in 2015 with Jane Glover, a returning conductor this summer. “To put together these major works in a week is phenomenal. There’s a big celebration afterward, because everybody feels, ‘Oh, wow! We did it!’”

Scor! String Camps

Beginning in March and continuing through August, Kyle and Beth Bultman hit the road with their moveable music camp for adult string players called Scor! They drive up to 12,000 miles in their “Scor!-Mobile”—a 55-foot motor home plus cargo trailer for all the musical supplies and equipment—to conduct a dozen camps in locations across the U.S. Nancy Mack, an Atlanta resident who started playing cello at 50 and has attended Scor! camps since 2007, likens the Bultmans to Johnny Appleseed. “They plant the seeds,” she says. “They go around the country and plant musical seeds.”

Beth, a violinist, and Kyle, a viola player, live in Rochester, NY, where both earned graduate degrees from the Eastman School of Music. The first Scor! was in Rochester in 2001, and it is still the largest, with up to 80 participants and running five days. Other camps, held at churches, schools, and conference centers in New England, Florida, Texas, California, Iowa, North Carolina, and elsewhere, are mostly three days long and draw from 20 to 35 people. The Bultmans teach at every camp, and they bring in cello and bass teachers. Eastman faculty are added at the Rochester camp.

Participants at Scor! “range from beginner to semi-advanced community orchestra-level players,” says Beth. Coaching and private lessons are available, but unlike many of these programs, Scor! does not emphasize preparing for a grand finale. “It’s a laid-back environment for adult string players to grow and learn without the pressure of a performance,” says Beth. “We want people to be able to accept their own progress and have joy in making music.”

And the most popular instrument? “You wouldn’t believe how many adults play the cello,” she says. “It’s because, I think, that for some older people, if you’re going to start a string instrument, it’s easier to sit vertically with your arm rather than twist your arm around for the violin. Sometimes our camps end up having half cellos and half violins.”

Dates: March through August, with 12 Scor! camps around the U.S.

Price: From $439; not including accommodations, meals. stringcamp.com / (877) 726-7267
Lake Field Music, now in its 39th year, is held on the campus of the Lakefield College School near the Kawartha Lakes region of Ontario. With about 120 participants and a faculty of 21, the camp, open to both instrumentalists and vocalists, is organized into six periods a day. The first period is Choir for All, a camp tradition, but after that the offerings entail more than 60 classes, workshops and ensemble-coaching sessions in classical, jazz, musical theater, chorus, and world music.

Kim Hanmer attended Lake Field Music for the first time two years ago. “I went not knowing anybody,” says Hanmer, a Toronto resident and piano-playing dental hygienist. “I arrived on Sunday and by Monday afternoon I realized this was going to be a fantastic week. The atmosphere is very positive. Even though I didn’t know anybody, within one day I made new friends that I’ve kept in touch with constantly ever since.”

“Most people load up their day because they don’t want to miss anything,” says Andrew Wolf, president of the board of directors. “If you want to do a focused, sort of serious violin or flute or piano or vocal thing, you can do classes that are pretty core to your instrument throughout the day, but we encourage people to take one or two periods where they’re doing something different, like West African drumming or Balfolk [European folk music and dance] or handbells.”

The camp monitors skill levels by posing pointed questions on the registration forms. “We’ll look at the classes they’re choosing to see if there is any potential problem,” says Wolf, who adds that small ensembles can be more demanding. “We cap the technique classes at eight to 10 participants, so everyone has a chance to get some personal attention during the week.”

Hanmer calls the schedule “busy, but busy fun—a can’t-wait-to-get-to-your-next-class busy.” Her experiences at Lake Field have included early music in a chamber group, an accompanist-soloist collaboration, and piano four hands. She’s taken introduction to organ and instruction in harpsichord, which she calls “a huge learning curve for me. But I can’t imagine not having this experience in my life now.”

Dates: Aug. 7–14

Price: From $1,199 (Canadian); accommodations and meals provided. lakefieldmusic.ca; (647) 692-3463

ARTOSPHERE FESTIVAL

FESTIVAL HIGHLIGHTS
The Festival will celebrate the opening of the Razorback Regional Greenway, a 36-mile trail linking dozens of community destinations between Bentonville and Fayetteville. The bicycle will be a popular theme and programming will emphasize its inherent connection to nature and social change. The annual Trail Mix event will invite community members to walk, hike, or bike the Razorback, listen to bands performing along the way, and interact with site-specific artwork. Stages will be powered by solar, pedal, or other renewable resources. Performances include the Artosphere Festival Orchestra, SPIN, Circa’s Carnival of the Animals, Egg and The Okee Dokee Brothers.

ASPEN MUSIC FESTIVAL AND SCHOOL

FESTIVAL HIGHLIGHTS
The theme “Invitation to Dance” points to the use of dance elements in musical works throughout the centuries, from Bach to Piazzolla. The Aspen Opera Center presents La Bohème (7/14, 16, 18); Bolcom’s A Wedding (7/28, 30); and Berlioz’s Béatrice et Bénédict (8/16, 18, 20). Programming includes great 20th-century American music by Charles Ives, Roger Sessions, Erich Korngold, Roy Harris, George Antheil, Peter Mennin, and others. A mini-festival features Shakespeare in music, and “White Nights,” with music by Russian, Nordic, and Alaskan composers. Spano conducts Kaija Saariaho’s L’Amour de Loin. Composition students study with some of today’s top composers. The 2016 finale is Orff’s Carmina Burana.

BAY CHAMBER CONCERTS SUMMER MUSIC FESTIVAL

FESTIVAL HIGHLIGHTS
While you can get your Bach, Beethoven or Brahms fix at the festival, it also offers musical flights of imagination. Included are living composers’ work for dynamic percussion groups; unconventional combinations of string instruments with guitars and electronics; projected visual art with performers; dazzling harpsichord or theorbo players in a recently written chamber opera. We are located on Midcoast Maine’s craggy and rugged shoreline along a bay dotted with hundreds of uninhabited islands, and crowned by pined mountains. The atmosphere is famously laid back: Leave stodgy at the door, wander around with a glass of wine and introduce yourself to the young artists who just lit up your senses, and your mind.

BERKSHIRE CHORAL INTERNATIONAL

(413) 229-8526 BERKSHIRECHORAL.ORG

It’s time to sing with us!

Berkshire Choral International is a unique way of learning and singing choral music in a rich and artistically stimulating setting. Our philosophy is that choral music is best when it is studied, absorbed, discussed and mulled over by choristers and conductors together in total immersion. From day one, our goal is to create an intense learning experience. Off-setting the energy spent in the condensed timeframe of rehearsals and classes are afternoon tours, sports and recreation.
